Harold Osborne, Winner of Decathlon Events, and Companions From Illinois Return.

Harold Osborne, winner; Henry Frieda, second, and Paul Jones, fourth, in the decathlon events at the A. A. U. meet held in the stadium at Philadelphia's Sesquiennial, Tuesday, spent Wednesday night in Gettysburg, as guests of Horace "Pinney" Bender, whom all three met when he was entered in the decathlon trials for the Olympics in New York City in 1924.

Osborne, Frieda and Jones are members of the Illinois Athletic Club, and resumed their motor trip to their homes in and near Chicago today, after spending the night at the Hill House, Chambersburg street.

The three decathlon athletes were accompanied by Justin Rankin, a member of the 1924 Olympic team.

Osborne, who practiced here on his way to Philadelphia last week, gave a great exhibition of endurance in the face of a grueling pain caused by a wrenched muscle in his leg, suffered in the pole vault. After the pole vault, he entered the hurdles' event, in which he finished seventh, all the time suffering excruciating pain.

In addition to the senior decathlon event, Osborne won the high jump on Tuesday.

Submarine Is Hauled for Thirty-three

The submarine S-51 was hauled to surface and suspended between the six pontoons shown in this picture. The tower can barely be seen between the central floats. Like a steel hearse the ship was towed to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, carrying the bodies of the thirty-three men who went down in it. The sub was rammed by a steamer off New London, Conn., and was raised only after nine months effort.

LOCAL STUDENT HURT IN FALL

Heidlersburg Girl, Senior in High School, Fractures Arm In Two Places.

Miss Ethel Houck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Houck, Heidlersburg, suffered a compound fracture of her left arm Tuesday, when she accidentally fell down a flight of stairs at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Stouffer, York, where she had gone earlier in the week to spend some time with Miss Margaret Stouffer.

A physician was summoned and he advised her removed to a hospital. The injured girl, who suffered numerous body bruises and intense pain, was admitted to the York Hospital, where X-ray photographs disclosed that her left arm was broken in two places just above the wrist.

Miss Houck completed her junior year at the Gettysburg High School in June.

12 BODIES FOUND IN S-51 BY DIVERS

Thirteen Seamen Believed to Have Been Washed From Submarine Since Accident.

New York, July 8.—Divers who entered the battered hulk of the United States submarine S-51 today reported that there were about twelve bodies inside the ship. One body was seen wedged behind machinery in the engine room and others were reported in the torpedo room.

If the divers' estimate is correct it means that the bodies of thirteen seamen were washed from the hulk by the waves as it lay on ocean bed after being sunk by the steamer City of Rome last September and will probably never be recovered.

When the collision occurred there were 36 men on the S-51. Three were saved and eight bodies were recovered later. It has been hoped that the remaining twenty-five bodies had lain in the submarine and could be reclaimed by the bereaved families.

COOLIDGE LANDS 3 POUND PIKE

President Has Hard Time Convincing Wife of His Ability as a Fisherman.

(By Associated Press.)
Paul Smith's, N. Y., July 8.—President Coolidge caught a three pound pike in Lake Osgood scarcely six hours after his arrival at White Pine Camp.

Trolling with a spoon in the little body of water, Mr. Coolidge hooked the pike and brought it aboard the boat of Oscar Otis, caretaker of the camp, who was at the oars.

Mr. Coolidge was delighted with his catch but had some trouble in convincing Mrs. Coolidge that he actually had caught the fish. Mr. Coolidge will have many opportunities to angle in the seclusion of the camp, for it is anticipated he and Mrs. Coolidge plan to spend at least the next few days quietly, without guests or other companions other than the household servants and the secret service men.

There are still many details of settling to be attended to, and it is believed the camp's distinguished guest will wish to stay close to the limits of the camp where the president plans to enjoy a real rest.

BIGLERVILLE TO HAVE CLOTHING FACTORY SOON

Syndicate From Baltimore Preparing To Open New Industry Employing About 25 Women.

Fribush Brothers, Baltimore cloak manufacturers, who operate branches at New Oxford and Abbottstown, will open a third plant at Biglerville next Monday morning.

The new branch will be known as the "Biglerville Garment Company" and will employ 25 women and five men when it opens.

The three branches in Adams county, of which New Oxford is the largest, employing between 65 and 80 women, are engaged only in sewing and pressing women's cloaks, all cutting and finishing being done at the main plant in Baltimore.

The new branch at Biglerville has rented the third floor of Thomas Brothers' building, Center Square, and today workmen were setting up sewing machines and pressers to start operations Monday morning.

May Increase Plant
The manager of the New Oxford plant this morning said that, if female help can be secured, the Biglerville branch will be increased, space affording accommodations for at least 100 sewing machines, he said.

The sewing factory at Abbottstown operated by the concern employs twelve women and two men.

The garment cut in Baltimore, are trucked to the branches in this county, where they are sewed and pressed. Vans take the finished garments back to Baltimore.

Ellis Bribush, one of the three brothers in the concern, will be the manager of the Biglerville branch. He is enthusiastic about the location in Biglerville, and hopes to ultimately increase its capacity until it is the largest of the three branches in the county.

Give Employment

Clyde Buckingham, York, inspector of the state department of labor and industry, bureau of factory inspection, visited the Thomas Brothers' building this morning, and pronounced it satisfactory in every respect for the purpose for which it is being put.

The new industry is expected to prove a boon for women of Biglerville, many of whom work in the apple packing houses there during the busy season. The apple packing work, however, is only seasonal, it is pointed out, whereas the sewing factory business is fairly well-sustained throughout the year.

GUIDES' REPORTS HAVE BEEN FILED

Superintendent Storrick Will Soon Make Public Statistics of Tourist's Travel Here.

Announcement will be forthcoming within the next few days of the total number of tourists taken over the battlefield here by guides during the three-month period, ending June 30, W. C. Storrick, superintendent of guides, said today.

A number of the reports of long and short trips made by the guides in April, May and June were returned because they were incomplete in one way or another, or were not satisfactory to the superintendent.

Mr. Storrick said, however, that he was well pleased with the majority of the reports turned in for their accuracy and neatness, and the fact that they were turned in on time, July 5 being the last day for the reports to be handed in to Mr. Storrick.

This is the first time the war department has made an effort to keep account of the number of tourists conducted over the battlefield by the guides, and interesting figures on the yearly total of visitors are expected to be forthcoming.

Several thousand members of Lutheran churches in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia are expected to gather at Pen Mar Park Thursday, July 22, for the fortieth annual reunion of Lutherans in the four-state district. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the choir of Christ Lutheran church, York.

Interest locally centers on the address of Doctor Diffenderfer, inasmuch as a new Lutheran women's college is to be erected and opened at Washington within the next two or three years. Pending the opening of the school there, plans of which the Washington divine is expected to set forth in his address, co-education will be continued at Gettysburg College until 1930.

JOHN D. OBSERVES 87TH ANNIVERSARY

(By Associated Press.)
Tarrytown, N. Y., July 8.—There are two anniversaries in the life of John D. Rockefeller which he celebrates each year, his birthday and the day he got his first job. His 87th birthday is today. The other big event is in September.

In the village of Richford, New York, the modern Croesus was born. "Rich" was quite a contrary description of the financial resources of the Rockefeller family when he was born, but hard work and constant activities have been his creed during his long life nearly a score of years more than the allotted span of three score and ten.

LARGEST ENGINE
NOW AT SESQUI

Electric Locomotive Used Over Mountains in Northwest Is Put on Exhibition.

Philadelphia, July 8.—The largest and most powerful electric locomotive in the world has been installed for exhibition in the Palace of Transportation at the Sesquicentennial International Exposition.

Built by the General Electric Company for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to haul its Olympian and other Chicago-Seattle trains through the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Mountains, the giant locomotive left Tacoma, Washington, a month ago on a journey of 3,500 miles to reach Philadelphia. Because of its immense size it was necessary to make several detours to reach Philadelphia, as movement under bridges and through tunnels on the direct route was impossible.

The locomotive is known as the bipolar gearless type and operates from an overhead trolley. It is seventy-six feet in length and has twenty-four driving wheels. Twelve motors placed directly on the driving axle propel the monster. The cab is in the center.

George C. Lincoln, Philadelphia representative of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and Frank J. Nowell, traveling passenger agent, who superintended the installation of the exhibit, declared that by utilizing the natural resources of the mountains the use of electrical energy created by water power has brought about a saving to the railroad of 265,000 tons of coal and more than 35,000,000 gallons of fuel oil annually.

Special entrance and exit platforms enable visitors to the sesqui to pass from one end of the locomotive to the other to observe the details of construction and operation.

HAMMER TAPS
JUDGE PEARSON

Laudatory Article Appears About Member of County Judiciary.

Another prominent countian has been "socked" by the "Velvet Hammer," as conducted as one of the features of a Harrisburg paper. The welder of this laudatory feature picks out Judge H. B. Pearson, of York Springs, who has been an associate judge in the county for several years.

The following appears about Judge Pearson.

Two Adams county judges of associate sort hold down the bench of justice and help to conduct the court; and one of them, his honor photographed for your delight, is here displayed to general inspection, sense and sight; but dealing out of justice is not this man's only task, for he has gobs of other jobs if you should chance to ask.

When Justice is depicted on her pedestal and stand, she always has a good supply of hardware in her hand, and Pearson's run for forty years a shop whose stock and scope included pistol, carving knife, chain, padlock, ax and rope—the instruments to work the crime you hankered to commit, and those by which in course of time you duly paid for it.

While sticking strictly to his town and closely to his trade, in many local offices his gifts have been displayed. A church official twenty years, a Mason countless nights—past master at New Oxford's hall of Blue Lodge Mason rites. He often shoots a pheasant and is dangerous to bucks, but won't assassinate a hare nor terrify the ducks.

BY ROYAL SOCIETY

London, July 8.—The Royal Society's gold medal for literature was presented at the society's centenary banquet to Rudyard Kipling. The English author made his first public appearance since his recent illness, and took a little fling at the critics.

"Fiction," he said, "began when some man invented a story about another man; it developed when another man told tales about a woman. This strenuous epoch began the first school of destructive criticism as well as the first critic, who spent his short but vivid life in trying to explain that a man need not be a hen to judge the merits of an omelette. He died, but the question he raised is still at issue."

Kipling, who received the medal from the hands of the Earl of Balfour, expressed proud appreciation of the honor.

PARDON BOARD RESTS

Members of the State Board of Pardons now are enjoying their annual vacation as no sessions are held during July and August. Although the board usually holds but one one-day session a month the members frequently spend much time in the study of cases, which they are unable to decide immediately after hearing arguments for clemency. Queries about the September session already are being received and members anticipate the usual heavy calendar for that month.

CAPITOL CLASSES PENDING

Harrisburg.—Whether or not student classes in stenography, typing, English literature and accounting are to be continued among Capitol Hill employees will be decided this summer. If classes are resumed they will open about October 1.

The classes for the past three years have been sponsored by Governor Pin-chot and Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary of the commonwealth. Their terms expire in January and for that reason announcement of next year's program has been deferred for the present, although a number of employees have signified a desire to continue their studies.

The classes which are taught by state employees who give their own time to the work function in the same manner as regular college classes. The students are given lectures and practical work and must pass periodic tests as well as final examinations which are closely marked. This year 46 state employees received certificates showing completion of courses studied.

PREPARE FOR SESSIONS

First signs that a legislative session is on its way have made their appearance in the Hall of the House of Representatives where workmen have been repairing the carpet which covers the entire floor of the hall. They will be followed by desk repairsmen for each desk is gone over just prior to a session.

The present carpet was laid about ten years ago and is beginning to show signs of wear. In a number of places it is thread-bare. Hundreds of yards of carpet are needed to cover the floor and it is considered not improbable that when the 1929 session convenes a new covering will be on the floor.

Tourists Jam State

The vacation season is here and with it heavier traffic on the state's highways.

Pennsylvania gets the tourist "coming and going". Western tourists coming east are arriving in the state in numbers while almost as many easterners heading westward are taking the Pennsylvania routes.

The Lincoln highway across the southern part of the state draws many with its scenic attractions and its historic spots such as the Gettysburg Battlefield.

Many northerners, particularly from New York state, who were in Florida for the winter, have been crossing the state homeward bound. Most of them take the Susquehanna Trail, the Lakes-to-the-Sea highway or the route by way of Philadelphia and the Delaware Water Gap.

LARGEST ENGINE
NOW AT SESQUI

Electric Locomotive Used Over Mountains in Northwest Is Put on Exhibition.

Philadelphia, July 8.—The largest and most powerful electric locomotive in the world has been installed for exhibition in the Palace of Transportation at the Sesqui-centennial International Exposition.

Built by the General Electric Company for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to haul its Olympian and other Chicago-Seattle trains through the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Mountains, the giant locomotive left Tacoma, Washington, a month ago on a journey of 3500 miles to reach Philadelphia. Because of its immense size it was necessary to make several detours to reach Philadelphia, as movement under bridges and through tunnels on the direct route was impossible.

The locomotive is known as the bipolar gearless type and operates from an overhead trolley. It is seventy-six feet in length and has twenty-four driving wheels. Twelve motors placed directly on the driving axle propel the monster. The cab is in the center. George C. Lincoln, Philadelphia representative of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, and Frank J. Newell, traveling passenger agent, who superintended the installation of the exhibit, declared that by utilizing the natural resources of the mountains, the use of electrical energy created by water power has brought about a saving to the railroad of 265,000 tons of coal and more than 35,000,000 gallons of fuel oil annually.

Special entrance and exit platforms enable visitors to the sesqui to pass from one end of the locomotive to the other to observe the details of construction and operation.

HAMMER TAPS
JUDGE PEARSON

Laudatory Article Appears About Member of County Judiciary.

Another prominent countian has been "socked" by the "Velvet Hammer," as conducted as one of the features of a Harrisburg paper. The wielder of this laudatory feature picks out Judge H. B. Pearson, of York Springs, who has been an associate judge in the county for several years.

The following appears about Judge Pearson.

Two Adams county judges of associative sort hold down the bench of justice and help to conduct the court; and one of them, his honor photographed for your delight, is here displayed to general inspection, sense and sight; but dealing out of justice is not this man's only task, for he has gobs of other jobs if you should chance to ask.

When Justice is depicted on her pedestal and stand, she always has a good supply of hardware in her hand, and Pearson's run for forty years a shop whose stock and scope included pistol, carving knife, chain, padlock, ax and rope—the instruments to work the crime you hankered to commit, and those by which in course of time you duly paid for it.

While sticking strictly to his town and closely to his trade, in many local offices his gifts have been displayed. A church official twenty years, a Mason countless nights—past master at New Oxford's hall of Blue Lodge Mason rites. He often shoots a pheasant and is dangerous to bucks, but won't assassinate a hare nor terrify the ducks.

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Clifford Dudley, matinee idol, re-neves his boredom while "touring the sticks" by flirting with a remarkably pretty country girl, Marie Downey. As innocent as prey, Marie thinks that because Clifford kissed her they have thus become engaged, and naively runs away from home and follows him on the train to New York. Realizing the seriousness of the matter, Clifford desperately turns for help to his hard-boiled leading lady, who takes the unsophisticated Marie under her wing, but with misgivings for her future.

"Well—well—he kissed me—quite a lot—and said he loved me—and—asked would I be his little girl."

"Exactly," said Sally. "However," she added internally, "that's not my business. Clifford's got to get out of that by himself, and, believe me, he can do it, too."

In spite of herself, however, she formed a sentence of doubt to this silly and too trustful child. But, looking at Marie's face, from which the fright had gone now, leaving it happy and wistfully-excited by the thrill of these actresses, a train ride with New York as the objective, and Clifford in the same car, remorse smote her, and she was quiet.

"After all," she told herself, "she'll find out soon enough." She veered off on a new tack.

"Don't you think your father will be very unhappy to find you're gone?"

Marie's face clouded, but only for an instant.

"Oh, but I left a note for him, and I told dad I was coming back. It won't be long, you know. When Clifford and I—are—are married, I'll go back for a visit."

"Are you sure you oughtn't to go home?" Sally searched her face.

"I see," said Sally Short, putting out her last cigarette.

earnestly and was rewarded by a glance of fear, suspicion and decision.

"I won't go home," declared Marie, shutting her lips tight. "I couldn't bear it—with Clifford gone." She almost wailed.

"Oh, my Lord!" cried Sally internally, as Clifford had cried not so long ago.

But aloud she only said: "You may have to stay at a hotel for a day or so, you know, before Clifford can—take care of you. Have you any money?"

This time there was acute trouble in Marie's face. No, she had no money. Only her fare to New York. Her birthday money, which she had saved. And, furthermore, she had no clothes. She had not dared to take a bag along when she slipped down the back stairs and into the train.

With a sigh, Sally took the plunge she had so often taken, with varying results:

"I can lend you some things. And you can bunk out with me in New York if you like. I have an apartment."

"On Broadway?"

"Near Broadway," smiled Sally. "I'd love to have you with me."

"Oh, I—I'd adore it. You're sure it—wouldn't be putting you out? I'd love it—of course if Clifford didn't mind."

"Oh, I'm sure Clifford won't mind," said Sally dryly, "and I'll be glad to have you. So that's settled."

All this time Clifford had been slumped carefully over his magazine. The dining room steward came through now with his "Last call for lunch! Last call for lunch!"

Clifford rose and was tramping with averted face past them when Sally grabbed his hand.

"Marie and I are going in with you, of course," she said sweetly.

There was a Puckish quality to Sally. She took a vast delight in watching Clifford's unconscious torments of self-consciousness through lunch, and she liked to see Clifford, who was notably stingy, pay for their meal.

SPAIN IS WAKING, SAYS CHESTERTON

British Author Declares Century of Rest Does Country "A Lot of Good."

London, July 8.—Spain is awakening after a siesta of centuries, in the opinion of G. K. Chesterton, famous author, who has just completed a tour of that country. Voicing his impressions he says:

"The Spanish are a very jolly, happy people, but they are rather on the principle of the box constrictor—an enormous meal, followed by a sleep.

"A great deal has been said about the backwardness of the Spanish people, but I cannot see that a century or so of sleep does anyone any harm. In fact, I came to the conclusion that a hundred years of rest is good for a nation.

"After all, the same criticism of being 'retrograde' was leveled at the Dark Ages, and the Dark Ages were a sleep that was followed by all the glories of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. We are too fond now, of calling everyone 'backward' who does not rush about in automobile or blacken the sky with factory smoke.

Signs of Awakening

"I see signs now of Spain's awakening and development. There is an impression of great richness and fullness of life, apart from any commercial or scientific enterprise.

"The dictatorship struck me as being a slightly stupid Fascism—a lot of Martial with a lot of not too intelligent Law. The chief center of unrest is Catalonia, where there seems to be a sort of separatist sentiment. Barcelona, with its strong tendency towards Industrialism, reminded me of Belfast—though, of course, it was much nicer than Belfast.

"The Catalonians are far more fussy than the rest of their countrymen. They are distinguished for what I can only describe as fanatical cleanliness. I found their rabid hygiene distressing. There seems to be an uncontrollable impulse to scrub everything. As a matter of fact, I have an idea that they practice this extreme cleanliness merely to annoy the rest of Spain.

Courtesy Services

"But in Spain there is one particularly impressive thing—the love of children for their parents, and of parents for their children. You will often see a small boy running in his enthusiasm almost the whole length of a street to meet his father—and father hugely enjoys it. It is one of those things that really do strike a stranger.

"There is also a survival of the old elaborate Spanish courtesy—the sort of courtesy which, we are told, impels a host to offer his entire household goods as a gift to the most casual stranger. But this—owing, I think to a rather large amount of leg-pulling—is dying out. Certainly I was not offered one El Greco during the whole of my tour!"

Mr. Chesterton said he had not considered writing a book on Spain, adding, "That would be a poor return for hospitality."

AMUSEMENTS

"Don't" At Strand

"Don't" is the title of the comedy which opened at the Strand Theatre last night. It is Alf Goulding's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, based on a story by Rupert Hughes.

From the opening shot of the picture, which shows a basketball game in full swing between the Alton and Newton girls' schools, the interest of the spectator is not for one moment lessened. There is a wild automobile ride which ends in the arrest of the hero on an ungrounded charge of theft and abduction made by the heroine, who forthwith speeds off with his machine only to be caught and served with a summons before her whole family; there is an outing at an amusement park, during which the family take in all the rides; there is the flight of the heroine after having received a good old-fashioned spanking at the hands of her parents for her behavior; there is a midnight encounter with a desperate vagabond and numerous other incidents of an equally gripping and amusing nature.

Members of the cast are Estelle Clark, James Morrison, Dewitt Jennings, Ethel Wales, Johnnie Fox, Dorothy Seay, Evelyn Peirce, Brinsley Shaw and Helen Hoge. Agnes Christine Johnston wrote the scenario.

Jack Holt At Lincoln

"Colorado" Rudd, a cowpuncher, who had lived the rough life of saddle and gun, whose horse's hoofmarks had covered all the trails of the West, from the heat of the Panhandle to the snows of Montana, is the colorful role which Jack Holt, popular Paramount player, enacts in "Born to the West," which comes to the Lincoln Way Theatre for an engagement of three days, starting Thursday.

Holt has played many vivid hero man western roles for the screen but all admirers agree that, as "Colorado" Rudd, he gives his finest characterization to the screen.

The picture is a visualization of Zane Grey's story and deals with an enmity between two men, starting from a fight in their school days and carried on in later years when their paths once more cross.

Raymond Hatton and Tom Kennedy furnish the comedy. Ariette Marchal, the family take in all the rides; there is the flight of the heroine after having received a good old-fashioned feminine beauty and romance.

There never was a smoke so pleasing as Camel

From the beginning Camel took its stand on the quality platform, and nothing could ever induce its makers to change Camel tobaccos. No expense is spared, no care is too great to make Camel the world's most satisfying smoke, regardless of price.

In popularity with smokers, no cigarette made can touch Camels.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Camel rewards its friends with enjoyment that never ends, for Camels never tire the taste, simply never leave a cigarette after-taste.

Realizing the seriousness of the matter, Clifford desperately turns to help to his hard-boiled leading lady, who takes the unsophisticated Marie under her wing, but with misgivings for her future.

"Well—well—the kissed me—quite a lot—and said he loved me—and—asked would I be his little girl."

"Exactly," said Sally.

"However," she added internally, "that's not my business. Clifford's got to get out of that by himself, and, believe me, he can do it now."

"Are you sure you oughtn't to go home?" Sally searched her face

But while the train flew raucously toward New York and the outer darkness shut in the travelers, making them instinctively draw closer to warm human companionship, while Marie curled up to Sally, and her mind lingered on the warm, soft darkness of Main street and the laughter floating from the porch swings, Joseph Downey brooded back of his hotel desk over a letter. The hotel was dull in the summer darkness, with no young voice of Marie tinkling in it. The cook and chambermaid gurgled and whispered in the kitchen. The chambermaid had found the note and read it first.

"Dear Pop—I have gone to New York. Don't worry, because Clifford Dudley loves me. We are engaged, and he will help me, and maybe I will go on the stage with him. Won't you like it when we both come back, rich and famous, to see my old pops? Don't be angry, will you, dad, because I do love him very much and he does me, and I will write you as soon as I get to the city. MARY."

Not for nothing had Mr. Downey been a hotel keeper for many years. He had no illusions. The note was a knell. But where in New York, supposing he went to it, should he find his daughter? Supposing he wanted to find her. But he did not. No. He shut his lips grimly, and the old proverb came to him, that about lying on the bed one has made. But—Clifford Dudley—ever showed his face hereabouts. Mr. Downey's lips worked spasmodically—he was a good shot, a dead shot, still.

He tore the note into little bits, and bent over his accounts. Tomorrow Jane, the chambermaid, would have repeated its contents all over town. He was a man only past middle age, but tonight he felt the age in his bones, and if he had not caught sight of himself in a mirror he would have sworn that it was a white head on a doddling frame which bent over his books.

CHAPTER IV

"I see," said Sally Short casually, putting out her last after dinner cigarette, "that our friend, the Great Lover, has made another big hit. The luck of that guy!"

She and Marie, now ensconced with seeming permanency in Sally's apartment in the West Forties, were sitting over the remains of an early kitchenette dinner. It was two months since Marie had so fortunately been gathered under Sally's protective wing on the train from Winesville. Two months of intimate association with Marie, living together, sharing kitchenette meals together, making a tour of the agencies and managers together and together making light of disappointments, had welded Sally's pitying interest into a firm affection. This affection was so entrenched that, on being offered the role of a minor principal in a revue called "Pretty Polly," Sally had clung to the manager like a stinging bee to its victim until he took on her buddy, Marie, as a chorus girl.

It had not been very difficult, to be sure, after the manager saw Marie. But as a little country girl, without experience, Sally often felt a shadow of annoyance cross her friendship that Marie should not seem to be amazed by her astounding luck. Even if "Pretty Polly" was staggering along as precariously as a drunken man down a flight of steps, never knowing which night might see the closing notice posted on the bulletin board, still it was not every country girl by a long shot who, so soon after a penniless entry into New York, had a friend, a home built securely on Sally's alimony checks, and such as it was, a job.

Sometimes, when Marie hung over the silent telephone all afternoon in the vague hope of a call from Clifford, sometimes when Marie tearfully excused his obvious delinquency by his preoccupation with rehearsals and worry over his new show, sometimes watching Marie sit up after the show to compose plaintive little notes—which were never answered—to Clifford, Sally put her down as a "plain sap."

And yet Clifford did call her up very occasionally, on the advice, the astute Sally guessed, of his manager, who feared an unpleasant bit of publicity if a poor little country girl, following her idol under which she considered promises of marriage, should make her plea to the courts and via the courts, to the papers. Sally was right. Mr. Dugan's advice to his client, after a succinct review of Clifford's bothersome amours, had been just that: "To string her along until she gets wise, and if she makes a holler—then—we'll see. She has no letters anyway. But that Sally Short she lives with is a pretty wise baby."

Often Sally had been on the point of giving Marie a heart-to-heart lecture. But watching Marie wilt over letters from home, which Sally guessed to be final renunciations on the part of her father and that little boy friend in the background, of whom she had learned, Sally's sharp tongue clove to her mouth.

SPAIN IS WAKING, SAYS CHESTERTON

British Author Declares Century of Rest Does Country "A Lot of Good."

London, July 8.—Spain is awakening after a siesta of centuries, in the opinion of G. K. Chesterton, famous author, who has just completed a tour of that country. Voicing his impressions he says:

"The Spanish are a very jolly, happy people, but they eat rather on the principle of the boa constrictor—an enormous meal, followed by a sleep."

"A great deal has been said about the backwardness of the Spanish people, but I cannot see that a century or so of sleep does anyone any harm. In fact, I came to the conclusion that a hundred years of rest is good for a nation."

"After all, the same criticism of being 'retrograde' was leveled at the Dark Ages, and the Dark Ages were a sleep that was followed by all the glories of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. We are too fond nowadays of calling everyone 'backward' who does not rush about in automobile or blacken the sky with factory smoke.

Signs of Awakening

"I see signs now of Spain's awakening and development. There is an impression of great richness and fullness of life, apart from any commercial or scientific enterprise."

"The dictatorship struck me as being a slightly stupid Fascism—a lot of Martial with a lot of not too intelligent Law. The chief center of unrest is Catalonia, where there seems to be a sort of separatist sentiment. Barcelona, with its strong tendency towards Industrialism, reminded me of Belfast—though, of course, it was much nicer than Belfast."

"The Catalonians are far more fussy than the rest of their countrymen."

They are distinguished for what I can only describe as fanatical cleanliness. I found their rabid hygiene distressing. There seems to be an uncontrollable impulse to scrub everything. As a matter of fact, I have an idea that they practice this extreme cleanliness merely to annoy the rest of Spain."

Courtesy Services

"But in Spain there is one particularly impressive thing—the love of children for their parents, and of parents for their children. You will often see a small boy running in his enthusiasm almost the whole length of a street to meet his father—and father hugely enjoys it. It is one of those things that really do strike a stranger."

"There is also a survival of the old elaborate Spanish courtesy—the sort of courtesy which, we are told, impels a host to offer his entire household goods as a gift to the most casual stranger. But this—owing, I think to a rather large amount of leg-pulling—is dying out. Certainly I was not offered one El Greco during the whole of my tour!"

Mr. Chesterton said he had not considered writing a book on Spain, adding, "That would be a poor return for hospitality."

AMUSEMENTS

"Don't" At Strand

"Don't" is the title of the comedy which opened at the Strand Theatre last night. It is Alf Goulding's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, based on a story by Rupert Hughes.

From the opening shot of the picture, which shows a basketball game in full swing between the Alton and Newton girls' schools, the interest of the spectator is not for one moment lessened. There is a wild automobile ride which ends in the arrest of the hero on an ungrounded charge of theft and abduction made by the heroine, who forthwith speeds off with his machine only to be caught and served with a summons before her whole family; there is an outing at an amusement park, during which the family take in all the rides; there is the flight of the heroine after having received a good old-fashioned spanking at the hands of her parents for her behavior; there is a midnight encounter with a desperate vagabond and numerous other incidents of an equally gripping and amusing nature.

Members of the cast are Estelle Clark, James Morrison, Dewitt Jennings, Ethel Wales, Johnnie Fox, Dorothy Seay, Evelyn Peirce, Brinsley Shaw and Helen Hoge. Agnes Christine Johnston wrote the scenario.

Jack Holt At Lincoln

"Colorado" Rudd, a cowpuncher, who had lived the rough life of saddle and gun, whose horse's hoofmarks had covered all the trails of the West, from the heat of the Panhandle to the snows of Montana, is the colorful role which Jack Holt, popular Paramount player, enacts in "Born to the West," which comes to the Lincoln Way Theatre for an engagement of three days, starting Thursday.

Holt has played many vivid he-man western roles for the screen but all admirers agree that, as "Colorado" Rudd, he gives his finest characterization to the screen.

The picture is a visualization of Zane Grey's story and deals with an enmity between two men, starting from a fight in their school days and carried on in later years when their paths once more cross.

Raymond Hatton and Tom Kennedy furnish the comedy. Arlette Marchal, Paramount's beautiful French player, and Margaret Morris supply the feminine beauty and romance.

"I see," said Sally Short, putting out her last cigarette.

earnestly and was rewarded by a glance of fear, suspicion and decision.

"I won't go home," declared Marie, shutting her lips tight. "I couldn't bear it—with Clifford gone." She almost wept.

"Oh, my Lord!" cried Sally internally, as Clifford had cried not so long ago.

But aloud she only said: "You may have to stay at a hotel for a day or so, you know, before Clifford can—take care of you. Have you any money?"

This time there was acute trouble in Marie's face. No, she had no money. Only her fare to New York. Her birthday money, which she had saved. And, furthermore, she had no clothes. She had not dared to take a bag along when she slipped down the back stairs and into the train.

With a sigh, Sally took the plunge she had so often taken, with varying results:

"I can lend you some things. And you can bunk out with me in New York if you like. I have an apartment."

"On Broadway?"

"I'd love to have you with me."

"Oh, I—I'd adore it. You're sure it—wouldn't be putting you out? I'd love it—of course if Clifford didn't mind."

"Oh, I'm sure Clifford won't mind," said Sally dryly, "and I'll be glad to have you. So that's settled."

All this time Clifford had been slumped carefully over his magazine. The dining room steward came through now with his "Last call for lunch! Last call for lunch!"

Clifford rose and was tramping with averted face past them when Sally grabbed his hand.

"Marie and I are going in with you, of course," she said sweetly.

There was a Puckish quality to Sally. She took a vast delight in watching Clifford's unwonted torments of self-consciousness through lunch, and she liked to see Clifford, who was notably stingy, nav for their meal.

There never was a smoke so pleasing as Camel

IN LIFE'S supreme moments no cigarette can compare with Camel. No other cigarette ever was made so good, for Camel excellence is the result of skill. Skill in finding the world's choicest tobaccos—in blending, as only the world's largest organization of experts can.

From the beginning Camel took its stand on the quality platform, and nothing could ever induce its makers to change Camel tobaccos. No expense is spared, no care is too great to make Camel the world's most satisfying smoke, regardless of price.

In popularity with smokers, no cigarette made can touch Camels.

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Camel quality has been rewarded with the greatest demand, the largest sales any cigarette ever enjoyed. Since smoking began, there was never such a growing preference as for Camels. Camel rewards its friends with enjoyment that never ends, for Camels never tire the taste, simply never leave a cigarette after-taste.

If you have never tried Camels, if you do not know how good, how satisfying a cigarette can be, we invite you to try them now for the utmost in smoking pleasure. Have the best that's made—we invite you—

Have a Camel!

TODAY'S TALK
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE WORLD OF MAKE-BELIEVE
UNDERNEATH our dreams are the things we do—and the men and women that we are.
Just bordering—always—this practical world, is that world of Make-believe, through which all the dross of the artist, the writer, the builder, the thinker, and dreamer is sifted.
We never reach our ideals. We only think about them, reach for them—and run after them. But this is the thing that keeps them alive for us. Of course there are those who believe that they will reach their ideals—and so it is that we have great men and women.
And it is much better to aim for worthy things and plan toward large achievements, even though you do not approach them, than to aim at nothing and get everything that you don't want.
The child knows nothing of the bitterness, the suffering and disappointments of life. Its smiles are bathed in a veritable sea of Make-believe. And it sees all the great things that the old heads worry so much about—and yet without any disturbance, and all within a spirit of belief and reality.
Let the child dream! And leave the man or woman alone with his or her dreams.
When Westinghouse went to that unique old man, Commodore Vanderbilt, with his invention for stopper cars by air pressure, Vanderbilt laughed at the chap and showed him the door. Now every train is equipped with those brakes in their most improved manner.
The writer of fiction sees the ways of men and women, then he dreams and leads some god of the imagination to these people of his brain and asks that god to make new clothes for them and put uniqueness to their lives. Then he writes a great story that we all read.
We like to feel that we are in countries which we may never visit, in lives with which we may never associate beyond these Make-believe visits of ours.

Just Folks

A TAILOR'S DIFFICULTIES
My tailor says, the while I stand
Before his oval mirror grand:
"That suit is perfect. Just behold
How neatly that lapel is rolled!
It suits your figure to the dot,
And really builds you up a lot.
It gives you height, it gives you grace;
What wrinkles show are in your face.
It hides your rounding stomach well.
My friend, I'll say that suit is swell."

A few days later, head erect,
I let the wife that suit inspect.
She looks me over, head to toe,
And merely says: "Ohum! Oho!
I wish you had a little taste!
That coat is sagging at the waist.
Stand up for just a minute please.
The trousers bag about the knees;
That collar's bulging at the back.
They've sold to you a flour sack."

"The pattern of the cloth is wrong,
It makes your skinny form too long.
The sleeves are short, the vest too tight;
I'd call that fit a fit of fright.
By now your tailor should have guessed
You cannot wear a double-breast.
You look like one the cops should shoot.
My dear, that is an awful suit!
They must have made it in the dark!"
Which seems a most unkind remark.

Oh, tailor, do the best you can,
But do not stop with pleasing man.
Rest not content when I declare
The garment one I'll proudly wear.
Though you and I perhaps agree
The raiment just the thing for me,
You face a sterner test by far.
Oh, well, you know how women are!
A tailor leads a double life:
He has to please both man and wife.

Little Jack Rabbit
by David Cory

As the little rabbit hopped out of the last story right into this one, landing, as I mentioned before, right on a grassy mound covered with arethusa, the prettiest of orchid flowers, he saw Tommy Turtle in the water right at his feet. Just beyond him the surface of the water dimpled with the under-swirl of Peter Pickerel's swift moving body as he chased a minnow, or from a quiet little cove a water-strider dented it into tiny ripples.

"Hello," cried the bunny boy, "what are you doing?"

"Just what Granddaddy Bullfrog is," answered Tommy Turtle, pointing to a shallow spot, above which rose a big stone.

"Where is he?" asked the little rabbit.

"Right over there. Don't you see his head just enough above the top of the water so that he can breathe. He's been sitting there in the cool water for two hours waiting for flies and gnats to come within reach."

"Ha, ha," laughed the little bunny, for the first time seeing the old gentleman frog, whose pop eyes above the top of his head were eagerly on the lookout for supper. "So he is." The next minute a beetle lost his foothold on a spear of grass nearby and dropped into the water. With a gulp, Granddaddy Bullfrog swallowed him, and with a solemn wink at the bunny boy waited for another morsel.

"Hope the next bug comes my way," said Teddy Turtle, and before the words were hardly out of his mouth, his wish came true. Down his throat went a big bug that had come too near for safety. It was a large mouthful, and for some time Teddy Turtle was kept busy grinding up his hard-shelled meal. By and by, with a solemn wag of his head, he pushed himself half way under a tussock of swamp grass for a nap, and drawing in his hind legs waved goodbye with his little spiked tail.

"Dear, dear," sighed the bunny boy, looking over the watercress blooms in which buzzed many busy bees, "I wonder what will happen next," and he hopped around the Old Mill to watch the sunfish in the pool below the dam,—a quiet spot, for the spring floods had long since passed into the Big Blue Ocean, and the Bubbling Brook now only purled and gurgled, turning but slowly the big mill wheel. From there this merry little stream prattled down to the Sunny Meadow, where along its banks the pink hardback stood up primly and the meadow-sweet and meadow-grasses bent gracefully over its gurgling waters. Further down the maple trees lent a grateful shade and the willows stood ankle-deep in the shallow places.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the little rabbit as Peter Perch darted out from a sandy hollow in the bank to catch a worm that came floating down stream. "Did it taste good?"

"I could eat a tadpole or a frog with greater relish," answered the yellow fish. "But one is thankful for anything that is brought right to one's table," and back to shelter he swam to await another chance to catch a bit of food.

All of a sudden from the Weeping Willow Tree Mrs. Oriole cried out to the little rabbit:

"In our bag-like nest our tiny ones

rest.
Like a cradle it rocks to and fro,
But it's safe as can be in the old Willow Tree
No matter how hard the winds blow."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE WORLD OF MAKE-BELIEVE

UNDERNEATH our dreams are the things we do—and the men and women that we are.

Just bordering—always—this practical world, is that world of Make-believe, through which all the dross of the artist, the writer, the builder, the thinker, and dreamer is sifted.

We never reach our ideals. We only think about them, reach for them—and run after them. But this is the thing that keeps them alive for us. Of course there are those who believe that they will reach their ideals—and so it is that we have great men and women.

And it is much better to aim for worthy things and plan toward large achievements, even though you do not approach them, than to aim at nothing and get everything that you don't want.

The child knows nothing of the bitterness, the suffering and disappointments of life. Its smiles are bathed in a veritable sea of Make-believe. And it sees all the great things that the old heads worry so much about—and yet without any disturbance, and all within a spirit of belief and reality.

Let the child dream! And leave the man or woman alone with his or her dreams.

When Westinghouse went to that unique old man, Commodore Vanderbilt, with his invention for stopping cars by air pressure, Vanderbilt laughed at the chap and showed him the door. Now every train is equipped with those brakes in their most improved manner.

The writer of fiction sees the ways of men and women, then he dreams and leads some god of the imagination to these people of his brain and asks that god to make new clothes for them and put uniqueness to their lives. Then he writes a great story that we all read.

We like to feel that we are in countries which we may never visit, in lives with which we may never associate beyond these Make-believe visits of ours.

Just Folks

A TAILOR'S DIFFICULTIES

My tailor says, the while I stand Before his oval mirror grand: "That suit is perfect. Just behold How neatly that lapel is rolled! It suits your figure to the dot, And really builds you up a lot. It gives you height, it gives you grace; What wrinkles show are in your face. It hides your rounding stomach well. My friend, I'll say that suit is swell."

A few days later, head erect, I let the wife that suit inspect. She looks me over, head to toe, And merely says: "Ohum! Oh! I wish you had a little taste! That coat is sagging at the waist. Stand up for just a minute please. The trousers bag about the knees; That collar's bulging at the back. They've sold to you a flour sack."

"The pattern of the cloth is wrong. It makes your skinny form too long. The sleeves are short, the vest too tight; I'd call that fit a fit of fright. By now your tailor should have guessed."

You cannot wear a double-breast. You look like one the cops should shoot. My dear, that is an awful suit! They must have made it in the dark! Which seems a most unkind remark.

Oh, tailor, do the best you can, But do not stop with pleasing man. Rest not content when I declare The garment one I'll proudly wear.

Though you and I perhaps agree The raiment just the thing for me, You face a sterner test by far. Oh, well, you know how women are! A tailor leads a double life: He has to please both man and wife.

Snappy Paragraphs

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

As the little rabbit hopped out of the last story right into this one, landing, as I mentioned before, right on a grassy mound covered with arethusa, the prettiest of orchid flowers, he saw Tommy Turtle in the water right at his feet. Just beyond him the surface of the water dimpled with the under-swirl of Peter Pickrel's swift moving body as he chased a minnow, or from a quiet little cove a water-strider dented it into tiny ripples.

"Hello," cried the bunny boy, "what are you doing?"

"Just what Granddaddy Bullfrog is," answered Tommy Turtle, pointing to a shallow spot, above which rose a big stone.

"Where is he?" asked the little rabbit.

"Right over there. Don't you see his head just enough above the top of the water so that he can breathe. He's been sitting there in the cool water for two hours waiting for flies and gnats to come within reach."

"Ha, ha," laughed the little bunny, for the first time seeing the old gentleman frog, whose pop eyes above the top of his head were eagerly on the lookout for supper. "So he is." The next minute a beetle lost his foothold on a spear of grass nearby and dropped into the water. With a gulp, Granddaddy Bullfrog swallowed him, and with a solemn wink at the bunny boy waited for another morsel.

"Hope the next bug comes my way," said Teddy Turtle, and before the words were hardly out of his mouth, his wish came true. Down his throat went a big bug that had come too near for safety. It was a large mouthful, and for some time Teddy Turtle was kept busy grinding up his hard-shelled meal. By and by, with a solemn wag of his head, he pushed himself half way under a tussock of swamp grass for a nap, and drawing in his hind legs waved goodbye with his little spiked tail.

"Dear, dear," sighed the bunny boy, looking over the watercress blooms in which buzzed many busy bees, "I wonder what will happen and the meadow-sweet and meadow grasses bent gracefully over its gurgling waters. Further down the maple trees lent a grateful shade and the willows stood ankle-deep in the shallow places.

Where is he? asked the little rabbit.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the little rabbit as Peter Perch darted out from a sandy hollow in the bank to catch a worm that came floating down stream. "Did it taste good?"

"I could eat a tadpole or a frog with greater relish," answered the yellow fish. "But one is thankful for anything that is brought right to one's table," and back to shelter he swam to await another chance to catch a bit of food.

All of a sudden from the Weeping Willow Tree Mrs. Oriole cried out to the little rabbit:

"In our bag-like nest our tiny ones rest. Like a cradle it rocks to and fro, But it's safe as can be in the old Willow Tree No matter how hard the winds blow."

END BUNION PAIN FOREVER

No Need to Suffer Another Day Those Agonizing Torturing Pains.

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflamed, swollen toe joints and get them down to normal and that is to apply Moore's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such enlargements would be wise to reduce them before they reach a more or less chronic stage.

Ask People's Drug Store or any first class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces last a long time and furthermore if this wonderful discovery does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and lumps are reduced to normal—adv.

Thousands Take Sea Water to End Eczema

Natural Mineral Salts in Ocean-O Revitalizes the Blood and the Most Obsolete Skin Eruptions Quickly Fade Away.

You've heard of Ocean-O, of course. Physicians have been using it for years. It is pure deep sea water distilled, concentrated and filtered and with the excess of common salt removed. And it contains the same natural mineral salts found in pure, healthy blood.

So when you have skin eruptions that torture or embarrass you it's probably because your blood is starving for want of just those vitalizing mineral elements that deep sea water or Ocean-O can furnish. When you start to rid yourself of eczema, pimples, acne, hives, scallow skin, boils and other stubborn skin diseases with Ocean-O, all you need is one teaspoonful in a glass of cold water and you drink this night and morning. That means that a bottle will last a long time.
